Apollo-16 Power On For Sunday Moon Shot

CAPE KENNEDY, Fig., April tivated three generators in the Apollo-16 moonship today and the countdown cruised without a hitch toward Sunday's launch to the moon's highlands.

The weather outlook remained satisfactory, although space flight meteorologists reported they were closely watching an intense springtime storm evolv-ing in the central United States. Paul C. Donnely, associate di-

Unions Reject British Plea On Rail Strike

LONDON, April 14 (AP).— Britain's 300,000 trainmen decided today to go ahead with a nationwide slowdown strike, rejecting an appeal for arbitra-

Union leaders dismissed government acousations of industrial blackmail and hints that Prime Minister Edward Heath might call a sudden general election on the issue of inflationary pay settlements.

The slowdown-including strict adherence to work rules and a ban on overtime throughout tha state-owned railroad network-is due to start at midnight Sunday in support of the unions' request for a 16 percent pay increase. The railmen have rejected an offer of an 11 percent increase.

The 11 percant pay increases would give tra'n engineers an average basic wage of £30 a week and other men more than £20.

The three major rail unions today rejected pleas from Employment Minister Maurice Macmillan to accept the rail board's offer to settle the dispute through arbitration.

Union statements made it clear that only an increased pay offer could avert the slowdown, which is expected to hamper passenger and freight services and disrupt industry.

An unofficial slowdown on London trains has crippled commuter services, causing huge rush-hour delays and in some cases open hostility between angry travelers and railmen.

The situation was heated by harsh words in Parliament as Labor members reacted angrily to a charge by Anthony Barber, Chancellor of the Exchequer, that the trainmen were blackmailing the country.

Russia Launches 1-Ton Satellite to Study Sun Rays

MOSCOW, April 14 (AP).— The Soviet Union today launched a satellite named Prognoz (Forecast), packed with equipment to study solar activity.

An announcement by Tass said the unmanned 1.890-pound satellite was in an earth orbit that was between 124,274 and 590 miles from earth. It orbits in 97 hours, at an angle of 65 degrees to the equator, the press agency said.

Tass said the satellite's equipment was operating normally. It is designed to study and radio back data on "corpuscular, gamma and X-ray radiation of the sun, polar plasma flows and their interaction with the magnetosphere of the earth and... magnetic fields in the nearearth outer space."

President Addresses Parliament

Nixon, Trudeau Plan to Seek To End Trade Talks Impasse

OTTAWA, April 14 (Reuters) .--President Nixon and Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudean today agreed to review their positions with the aim of breaking a deadlock over trade that recently has strained rela-tions between the two countries. Mr. Nixon came here last night on a two-day visit hoping to ease current strains in U.S.-Canadian relations largely brought about by trade differences. White House press secretary Ron Ziegler said that the agreement by both countries to review their positions did not necessarily mean that mutual concessions would be forthcoming. But he said that there now was a very good possibility that negotiations-broken off in February-would resume soon. The United States has been putting strong pressure on Can-ada to lower tariffs, particularly on cars, to reduce the large Canadian trade surplus. Canada has stubbornly resisted. arguing that the trade surplus is wiped out by profits from U.S. business interests in Canada.

enemy offensive in Binh Long Province north of Saigon was carefully planned last winter in Hanoi as a trap to draw the South Vietnamese Army away from more-populated areas near the capital and the Mekong Delta, making them vulnerable to guer-rills attack, according to secret enemy directives made available today by intelligence sources.

campaign, to last for one to two months, that resembles remark-ably the serious battle developing in Binh Long Province, where the South Vietnamese government has rushed in its last reserves of paratroopers and the 21st Division from the lower Mekong Delta 160 miles away to try to save Salgon's Fifth Divi-

Viet Cong in Paris Again Ask U.S., Saigon to Attend Talks

PARIS, April 14 (AP).-The Viet Cong today reiterated their demand that the United States and South Vietnam return to regular sessions of the Vietnam peaca talks here.

Ly Van Sau, spokesman for the Viet Cong delegation to the talks, said at a news conference, "President Nixon must cease his aggressioo against Vietnam. cease support of President Nguyen Ven Thieu and resume the peace conference to respond positively to our peace plan."

Otherwise, Mr. Sau said, "The South Vietnamese people will continue their fight for independence."

He noted that the Communists had demanded that the United States and South Vletnam resume meetings on April 6 and April 13. "But all we received in response were arrogant notes rejecting our proposals . . . and a continuation by the United States of the cruel war," he said.

Asked about a statement yesterday by Ambassador William J. Porter that President Nixon had secretly proposed to the other side a meeting on April 13, Mr. Sau said: "Our delegation is not aware of such a message." The Viet Cong spokesman was then asked if Mr. Nixon's secret message might have gone to the North Vietnamese. He replied, "I don't know."

Vietnamese delegation said today. "There can be no question resuming the usual weekly meetings, which have been revealed to be purely ritual, until Hanoi has shown a sincere desire to settle the conflict peacefully by negotiations."

The Viet Cong spokesman spent most of his briefing giving a long list of victories during the current Communist offensive in South Vietnam.

He also said that many South Vietnamese military units had surrendered and that thousands of South Vietnamese in "concentration camps" had freed themselves and risen up against the Saigon government.

New Attacks Called Worst Since 1968 ...

SAIGON, April 14 (NYT).— The battle for the provincial capital of An Loc. 55 miles north of Saigon, raged tonight amid indications that powerful enemy reinforcements of infantry and tanks were on the way. Even without fresh forces North Vietnamese troops reportedly were maintaining their hold on those parts of the town that they seized yesterday. They continued to command artillery positions, pouring heavy fire on the South Vietnamese defenders.

The enemy grip on Route 13 also tightened as Saigon's rein-forcements tried unsuccessfully to move to the relief of An Loc.

It was reported that concentrated bombing by B-52s and fighter-bombers on the ouiskirts of An Loc had killed 200 enemy soldiers, but the threat to the town and the encircled troops evidently remained critical.

Labor Wins By-Election; Margin Cut

April 14 (AP),-Britain's opposition Labor party early today won a special parliamentary election here, but by a smaller margin tnan last time.

It was the first significant test of the party's popularity since it was torn this week by a deep leadership split over its attitude to British membership in the European Economic Community.

The official party candidate, Edward Rowlands, won a seat in Parliament with a margin of less than 4,000 votes over his nearcst rivel—a Welsh National-ist—ln a mixed field of Conservative. Communist and Liberal hopefuls.

An independent Laborite held the scat at the general election in 1970 with a majority of more than 7,000. Before Labor divided in the district between the official and unofficial candidates, its majority was 17.665.

Labor, however, could take comfort that the ruling Conservative party's candidate's vote dropped. The real gainer was the Plaid Cymru-Welsh Nationalist-who carried his party's vote from 3,076 in 1970 to 11.852.

Brandt Urges Pact Foes to Confer Again Seeks to Head Off New Delaying Tactics

BONN. April 14 (AP).—Two days after top-level talks between Chancellor Willy Brandt and apposition leader Rainer Barzel ended in deadlock, Mr. Brandt's government pressed today for a new round of discussions on its controversial Eastern treaties.

But government spokesman Conrad Ahlers told a news conference that the government is now convinced the treaties with Moscow and Warsaw will get the parliamentary majority needed for ratification.
Unlike the last Brandt-Barzel

Instead Mr. Brendt wants to meet Mr. Barzel again in two weeks to try and dissuade him from using fruitless delaying tactics after the crucial May 4 vote. thus holding up hut not blocking the ratification.

Mr. Ahlers also rejected opposition criticism that the treaties
—which recognize World War II
German territorial losses—contain too few guarantees holding the Communist side to its bar-gain. He aaid Christian Democrat statements of the past two days do not make clear whether Mr. Barzel will accept Mr. Brandt's offer of new talks. The main issue now is to avoid anarling the "entire international detente schedule," he said.

If the ruling Social-Liberal coalition—which has only 250 deputies to the opposition's 246 in the Lower House—can get the treaties accepted with an absolute majority of 249 votes on May 4. their future and that of the government will be assured.

But the Upper House, where the opposition has a 21-20 majority, could still force a second Lower Rouse vote which could delay the whole process until some time in June—thus preventing an early start to the pianned East-West European security conference, which the North Atlantic Treaty Organization could otherwise have discussed at a Bonn meeting on May 30-31. Meanwhile, the legal committee of the Lower House—which earlier this week approved the

Moscow treaty for recommendation-today gave the go-abead to the Warsaw treaty. The two pacts are now being discussed by the foreign affairs committee, which votes on them in about 10 days before passing them on to the Lower House for two final readings.

Hanoi Planned Trap to Lure Saigon's Troops from Capital

(Continoed from Page I) South Vietnam's army even though it "enjoys extensive U.S. air, fire and mechanized support. The authors say that South Vietnam'a disastrous campaign in Laos last year proves that North Vietnam's army is superior.

Among the other points made in directives are: The offensive was originally scheduled to hegin in early February, as U.S. officials had repeatedly predicted, but was delayed for unstated reasons. . In addition to "inflicting heavy iosses on U.S. and government forces" and "defeating the Vicinamization program," an original purpose of the offensive was "undermine President Nixon's political influence and render his visit to Peking in February-a political failure." • Hanoi counted heavily on U.S. anti-war sentiment to limit the Nixon administration's reaction to the offensive. The authors extimate that in the face of the attacks, "the U.S. will continue its troop withdrawal schedule and its reduction of ald to the government. · Serious weaknesses are admitted in the organization and strength of the Viet Cong guerrillas, as contrasted to the North Vietnamese Army. "Recruitment of scoret guerrillas has been totally indequate," Directive 43 states.

The directive also criticizes the dissemination of party orders as "inadequate and superficial" and accuses village leaders of relying on the regular North Vietnamese Army rather than building up local guerrilla units. Uprising Planned

Directive 43 specifies that the attacks by regular army troops must be preceded by a "spontan-eous uprising" in villages and The order warns the North Vietnamese Army commanders "to refrain from exposing themselves until after the spontaneous uprising occurs."

Unlike the enemy's Tet offensive of 1968, when there were widespread, though eventually abortive, uprisings by guerrillas in South Vietnam's cities, there have been no guerrilla incidents in the last two weeks in the urban arcas. U.S. abalysts are unsure whether this means that the Viet Cong are too weak to carry out the directive or whether there has been a change in plan and the uprising will come in a later phase of the offensive. Directive 42 states that the "main theaters of war during this campaign" will be Tay Ninh, Binh Long and Binh Duong Provinces. north and west of Saigon, and

WASHINGTON April 14 (UPI).

The United States and the Soviet Union today postponed until Monday the opening of their negotiations on liquidating the Soviet World War II debt to the United States. A State Department spokesman Charles W. Bray, said the Soviet delegation had asked for the postponement hecause of fatigue following its arrivat in Washington last night. The talks began in 1948 but bogger down in 1951-52 and again in 1960.

During World War II. the United States extended to the Soviet Union lend-lesse assistance estimated to be worth $10.8 billion. The United States has reduced the amount it is asking in repayment from $1.3 billion to $800 million. The Russians have raised their offer from 8170 million to $300 million. Settlement of the lend-lease debt is considered essential for clearing the way to increased Soviet-U.S. trade.

5 Mine Union Officials Implicated In Murder of Insurgent Yablonski

By Ben A. Franklin

WASHINGTON, Pa., April 14 (NYT) - Top officials of the United Mine Workers of America were strongly implicated in court: yesterday-for the first time-in the planning and financing of the murder of Joseph A. Yablonski, the UMW reform leader who was shot to death with his wife and daughter two years and three months ago.

The testimony repeatedly linking the union and at least one official of its headquarters in Washington, D.C., directly to the payment for the Yahlonski murders, came in a 22-page confession read in the Washington

Mrs. Gilly's statement was given to the FBI with the consent of her lawyer, Gerald Gold of Cleveland, and was "varified," according to prosecution spokes-men, in extensive lie-detector tests. It was made public in court to rebut a petition for the release on ball of Silous Huddleston, Mrs.

U.S. Bishops Issue Attack On Abortions

By William R. Mackaye

ATLANTA, April 14 (WP).— The nation's Roman Catholic bishops yesterday condemned a presidential commission's endorsement of abortions and rejected the agency's assumption that the quality of American life would be enhanced if they diminished oulation growth

Reiterating their 1969 judgment that "abortions and infanticide are unspeakable crimes, the prelates declared that use of abortions to eliminate unwanted children rests on "an immoral and dangerous principle."

The 240 bishops attending the hlerarchy's spring meeting here questioned the need for any curbing of population growth or for establishment of a national population policy, a direct chalthose seeking to lenge to popularize smaller families

'Change of Heart'

"Experience has already taught us that our sociai problemspoverty, disease, injustice and violence-are not soived merely by population decrease but require a change of heart and a reordering of priorities for the entire nation," the bishops said.

They called for Catholics and other Americans to participate next October in a week of prayer and study dedicated to the sanctity of human life.

The President's Commission on Population Growth and the American Future, which published its report last month, spoke of the need to "accelerate the advent of stabilization" in the nation's

This intest historical footnote to Lincoln's death culminates almost a half-century's work for the grandson, Dr. Richard D. Mudd, who is also a country doctor. a few hours later, but not before Mrs. Mudd saw his faise beard slip off once. After the Mudds learned of the several thousand citizens who assassination the next day, they notified authorities. Five days later, Mr. Mudd was arrested as a conspirator. He was tried and convicted by a military commission, as were aeven others. Four were hanged and four went to prison for life. According to Don E. Four years later, Dr. Mudd was pardoned by President Andrew Johnson after the doctor valianttended fellow inmates during a yellow fever epidemic, But to many of Dr. Mudd's 280 living descendants, who include Roger Mudd, the television reporter, a pardon was not an exoneration.

Since then, lawsuits have challenged the constitutionality of Dr. Mudd's trial by military authorities when civilian courts were in session, But federal officials, including President Lyndon B. Johnson, were apparently reluctant to see a precedent that could also exonerate the real conspirators. Despite countless let-ters and visits by Dr. Mudd, they failed to act. And despite Dr. Mudd's pleas and legal arguments, the U.S. Army, whose officers presided at the doctor's trial, has remained adamant that the sentence must

The Economy and the Campaign

The coming presidential election campaign seems to be developing mainly in terms of arithmetic: tax rates, growth rates, the numbers of Americans still in Vietnam, the numbers of children in (or not in) desegregated schools. The crucial argument over inflation and employment rolls endless!y along, refueled each month by a new spate of statistics. But it remains very interesting. possibly because it is one of the few political issues touching everyone directly, and possibly because the election may turn, in the end, on these numbers.

The March unemployment rate of 5.9 percent means that there has been no improvement here since late 1970, when the country was moving into a recession. The administration understandably prefers to emphasize the rise in the number of people employed which, over the past month, has been striking. There is some doubt regarding the precise size of this rise. The government counts jobe in two ways, through household surveys and through payrolls. Currently the two sources are sharply divergent, offering the layman a useful reminder that these statistical indicators are not exact. But even the payroll figure, which shows a lower rate of increase and which is probably more reliable, remains impressive. The number of jobs is expanding strongly, and yet the number of people looking for jobs remains stuck fast at 5 million.

The answer to the riddle is, of course, the very rapid growth of the labor force. The population is increasing and, at the same time, the United States is coming out of a long recession. During that recession, hundreds of thousands of Americans dropped out of the labor market altogether. They were sure that they could not find jobs and they did not bother looking. They were not counted at all, either as employed or as unemployed. Now, as the economy picks up momentum, they are being drawn back into the labor market. As they see other people find jobs, they join the hunt themselves and as they hunt they are counted. Until the economy has drawn down the reservoirs of idleness created by the recession, the number of jobs in this country can expand much faster than the population of working age without reducing the number of people looking for work.

Here the argument is whether this kind of unemployment deserves to be taken seriously. The administration and its Democratic critics have been debating the point for months. The March figures can be used to feed both sides. Last month the unemployment rates continued to decline for married men, adults, whites, and in general those categories with traditionally low rates (although their rates are still a great deal higher than they were in 1969). For the groups with traditionally high rates, the young and the blacks, the rates have been rising steadily for more than two years.

As for prices, the latest figures indicate that the controls are having an effect. But it is neither so quick an effect, nor so complete, as most consumers had expected. The wholesale price index rose only 0.1 percent from February to March, compared with 0.7 percent the previous month. While that trend is hopeful, it requires one sharp qualification. The reduction was mainly owed to a drop in the price of food which, as the country was forcefully reminded last month, is largely uncontrolled. Because of the public eensitivity of food prices, the administration has good reason to rejoice that they dropped after the dramatic increases a month earlier. But food prices are extremely volatile, and they can be expected to keep bouncing up and down.

Excluding food, the wholesale price index for consumer goods actually rose 0.3 percent in March, compared with 0.1 percent the month before. The price index for industrial goods also rose 0.3 percent in March. a slight decline from earlier in the winter but still considerably higher than the figure that Mr. Nixon needs if he is to bring inflation down to his target of an annual rate around 2.5 percent by the end of the

The question, in the end, is what the American people are willing to settle for, Their government can get much tighter control of inflation, but only through closer regulations and more severe enforcement. It can reduce employment, even smong the young and the blacks, but that will take public initiative and public money. It will not happen automatically, like the coming of spring. These issues are not essentially economic, but social and moral.

The Nixon administration is finding both inflation and unemployment a great deal harder to remedy than it had expected. Now It is contemplating the next round of possible measures, and wondering what the public reaction will he. The President now has only seven months in which to make these intransigent numbers move.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

Vietnam Recommitment

of American power and prestige in Vietnam is ominously reminiscent of President Johnson's costly and futile intervention that began in 1965, a few months after the Tonkin incidents. Because of the risks of a prolonged and etill wider war and the danger that the growing concentration of sea and air forces in Southeast Asia may seriously dilute this country's capacity to deal with emergencies elsewhere it is essential that Americans take a hard look at the premises upon which this latest escalation is hased, as most did not do in 1965.

This administration's hasic fustification for its actions is hauntingly familiar—that it is necessarily defending freedom against a clearcut case of Communist aggression across international boundaries, aided and abetted by Moscow. This theme is reflected in President Nixon's admonition to the Soviet Union that "a great responsibility rests upon the great powers, that every great power must follow the principle that it should not encourage directly, or indirectly, any other nation to use force or armed aggression against its neighbors."

The reality is that the United States and the Soviet Union are both meddling in a civil conflict in Vietnam. The crucial question for Americane is whether it is vital for U.S. interests to preserve the present anti-

President Nixon's massive recommitment Communist government in an independent South Vietnam; or at least whether that goal, doggedly pursued by President Nixon like his predecessors, is important enough to warrant the high costs and risks of continuing direct involvement.

> The present regime in Saigon is hardly a credible model of democratic freedom. The coalition government that might emerge if the Vietnamese were left to settle their own affairs would not necessarily be dominated by Communists, at least at the outset. Even the Communiste in South Vietnam have indicated they are in no hurry to reunite with the North.

> In the event the administration's worst fears were realized, a united Vietnam under Communist rule could pose no serious threat to the United States, Indeed, it could be argued that a united Vietnam would more effectively restrain the extension of Chinese power in Southeast Asia, which was the original objective of U.S. intervention

Prolonging the war does not serve this country's true interests. The massing of U.S. air and navai forces in Southeast Asia to rain more death and destruction on a small, underdeveloped country represents a grotesque perversion of American power and

Equal Opportunity in S. Africa

The example set by General Motors and other American industries in equal opportunity for all race groups in South Africa was one that can and ought to be followed more widely, The country's labor laws restrictive though they may be, still leave coneiderable latitude for employers. There is no reason why they should not do more than most of them at present are doing in support of the principle of equality of opportunity. They would thereby service not only the cause of better race relations and thus the national interest, but by helping to create a strong economic base of skilled, well-paid, stable and contented labor, they would in a very real sense be advancing their own interests.

CNDON.—Some analysts of the American political system argue that its malaise could be cured by making the major parties more responsible, with firm principles and loyalties. The example often cited is Britain, with its disciplined parties in Parliament and its modern tradition of party government.

The parliamentary system can indeed work, but it is not just a matter of effective machinery. Like any other human enterprise, it depends on people-on leadership. When leaders are spineless or unprincipled, the sys-

That is the interesting lesson of the latest convulsion in British politics. The resignation of Roy Jenkins as deputy leader of the Labor party, and of others from its hierarchy, is the most traumatic event for Labor in many years. And a major reason for the disaster is the man who now surveys the wreckage: Harold Wilson, leader of the opposition.

Harold Wilson is no ruthless Machiavelli prince gone wrong. He is a personally kind man who deeply resents the often-made criticism that he twists and turns in politics, with regard not for principle but only for personal survival. But whatever the motive, the record speaks for

Issue Is Europe

Europe is the Issue that has undone Wilson and his party. As the world knows. Wilson, as prime minister before June, 1970, was an enthusiast for British membarship in the Common Marketthe man who said he would "not take 'no' for an answer." When his Conservative successor, Edward Heath, succeeded in negotiating entry, Wilson switched to

The reason Wilson gave was that the negotiated terms were not good enough for Britain. Literally no one closely involved in the negotiations under either Labor or the Conservatives believed that: The terms were what any British government would have to pay to join the market. But Wilson's friends argued that he really had to do what he did. The case went like this: The Labor party was divided on Europe. Only by opposing "the terms" could Wilson (1) hold the party together, (2) keep it from slipping into outright opposition to the principle of membership in the Common Market, (3) have a chance of defeating Heath in Parliament, thus forcing an early election, and (4) maintain the national image of Labor as a mature and credible party ready

Jenkins and other Labor supporters of the Common Market tried to reconcile their principles with Wilson's stated political objective of party unity. They decided to stay in the shadow cabinet, on the assumption that Wilson would help to protect them from being harried for their pro-European views.

What actually happened is that the party'e left, strongly against the Common Market, used every possible occasion to harry Jenkins and his friends. And Wilson, rather than helping them stick to the European beliefs that he had ence professed himself, joined in the fun of embarrassing

The last straw was a curious, indeed ridiculous one. A small group of Conservative backbenchamendment, And Roy Jenkins had had enough, He saw that if he swallowed that gnat, the anti-Europeans would soon find a camel-and get Harold Wilson to lead !t.

Whatever Wilson's motives, he has managed to achieve catastrophe for himself and his party. Labor is split in two. It is rapidly moving toward outright opposition to the principle of Europe-a step likely to come at the party conference next fall, and to be even more wounding. The country sees Labor as dominated by its old left, those stuffed sabertoothed tigers who have not had a new idea in a generation. There could hardly be a worse political image.

And of course there is now next to no chance of upsetting Heath. Some call him lucky. But on the European issue Heath has stuck to his beliefs despite many predictions of defeat in Parliament and the country, so it is the luck of courage and principle. Until Labor has a leader with those qualities, it will remain a party without credibility, enfechling the British political system

The U.S. Sports Crisis By James Reston

Seasons Far Too Long

NEW YORK—There is bad news from the baseball front these days. The big league players are ending their strike before the sunny weather begins, and as any nit-wit knowe, watching baseball in a topcoat is almost as silly as sweating out a professional football game in August.

The idea of unionized ball players, with strikes and eventually double time for overtime games, is a little hard to take, but organized baseball is almost the last symbol of involuntary servitude in this country, and anyway, anything that cuts down the length of the sports seasons, even strikes, can't be all bad.

Inflation has hit the world of sports in America even harder than the world of politics or commerce. The price of quarterbacks and tackles on the hoof has gone up even higher than the price of beef, and the sports seasons now last almost as long as the presidential primaries.

There isn't a single professional sports season now that doesn't go on at least a month too long. Baseball starts in football weather, and football in baseball weather. and basketball overlaps them both. It starts around World Series time and goes on among the wounded until Easter, when the playoffs start, and then the playoffs of the playoffs until Memorial Day, when football spring training is already over. What has happened of course, is thet commercialized sport has become the most lucrative and popular entertainment in America today, and no wonder. The jet airplane has expanded its reach to the boundaries of the Republic. and the television has inflated the earnings of the sports arenas and the sports stars beyond the dreams of the leading managers, ladies, and heroes of stage and

The Big Games are definite, dramatic and free. For the average Joe, and even for the President of the United States, they are a relief from the endless uncertainties of job and family. They have a beginning, a middle or halftime (with music and pretty girls) and an end, when you know who has won. What else is so sure, so interesting, and so available at the flick of a television switch?

But even an old geezer and sports buff has to wonder whether the sports promoters are not going too far and getting into trouble. The longer the seasons the higher the profits. Okay But the more they take cut or the players, the more the players demand. And one day, if they all go on too long and demand too much, they will lose the magic The lesson of the baseball strike is that almost nobody missed then. In their commercial competition for the television contracts and the coming sports stars, the promoters are killing one another They are turning sport into commerce, and while it worked for a while to the benefit of both the promoters and the players they are now in danger of hurting everybody concerned.

Sport in America, with all its excitement, and its problems, dramatizes many other aspects of American life. It begins with ideals and ends with commercial success. But it devours its heroes

There are no rules that will reconcile human energy and human ambition, no means of testing men other than by exhausting them. The sports heroes live by the gate receipts, the politicians by the polls, and both by television, but somehow the system doesn't work, and the game plays out.

This is what has happened with the baseball owners and their players in the strike. They have stopped the game in order to rewrite the rules, but they haven't succeeded. Maybe they should have gone on longer because everything is out of season, and needs to be cut down to size.

Italian Reds Cite Danger In Vielence Fear Extreme Left

May Aid Neo-Fascists

By Paul Hofmann ROME, April 14 (NYT),-The Italian Communist party today vehemently denounced ultra-leftist violence in the present electoral campaign and warned that it was playing into the hands of rightists.

The statement represented Moscow-line Communism as a supporter of legality and Democratic fair play. Law and order is a major issue in the general elections that are to be held on May 7 and 8.

In today's appeal, the Communist party directorate in effect called on the rank and file to prevent far-left groups from disturbing and breaking up neo-

Fascist campaign rallies. "Any attempt to hamper the electoral compaign by violating its rules must be rejected," the Communist statement said. "It is inadmissible to take recourse to forms of protest that may lead to clashes and repressive and indiscriminate police intervention." The Communist party warning was clearly prompted by a rash of disorders from the big cities in northern Italy to Sicily.

Riois on the Left Almost all of the riots nunctuating the electoral campaign have been touched off by ultra-leftists who attack orators and participants in rallies of the Italian Social Movement, the par-liamentary branch of neo-Fas-clsm, and fight with the police.

modern painting back to this era. In this connection, James Ensor is important. The first post-World War II German retrospective, on view in Stuttgart until May 7, is long overdue.
It is almost as dificult today as it was in his own time to categorize Ensor. Born in Ostend in 1860 of an English father and a Belgian mother, he lived in back of his family's souvenir shop until he died in 1949.

For three years (1877 to 1880) he studied art in Brussels under

For a few years, the XX group was Ensor's link to the world, as an artist and as a man. His paintings rejected for exhibition in academic salons, he soon became the dominant member of the XX. But not for long.

> Ensor's aggressive vision shocked even progressive spirits. To them, be had become a traditionalist with his unrealistic—even surrealistic—world reminiscent of Bosch and Bruegel. His avantgarde contemporaries did not understand that, to him, tradition was something to play with, something to be converted intn new meanings.

After many quarrels, Ensor left Brussels and withdrew into his own imaginary world in Ostend. Within 15 years, he had created a body of work that made him the "Dürer of his tima," as one French art historian put it. In time, the world acknowledged his talent—there is a monument to him in Ostend. He lived on in the backroom of the souvcnir shop, surrounded by paintings, playing the plane and outliving his own creative inspiration.

Beethoven's 9th Symphony -Played on Two Pianos

By Henry Pleasants

ONDON, April 14 (IHT) .- The principal item in last night's pro-L gram at Queen Elizabeth Hall was Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Nothing unusual in that, of course. The Ninth will be the principal item in any program. What made this occasion notable was the absence of orchestra and chorus. The symphony was played on two planes by the American twins, Richard and John Contiguitia, in a transcription by Franz Liszt.

It may well have been the first performance ever of this extraordinary example of the transcriber's, or arranger's art. It dates from about 1850, and crowned Liszt's project, which he had begun as early as 1837, of transcribing all line of Beethoven's symphonies for plano. But readily available reference works make no further mention of it beyond the fact that Joachim brought it to Clara Schumann and Johannes Brahms in Düsseldorf in 1855, and that Clara and Brahms played it in celebration of the latter's 22d birth.

Unfashionable

The problem may have been that there were not, in those days two Franz Liszts to play it. That and the fact that public performance of piano transcriptions of symphonic and operatic masterpieces was rapidly becoming unfashionable. Europe was aware of a musical heritage as it had never been aware before. Innocent pleasure in the product of the masters was giving way to reverence—and a tendency to regard transcription as sacrilege.

There was nothing sacrilegious, goodness knows, about Liszt's approach to the transcription of Beethoven. "His symphonies." List wrote in the preface to the collected transcriptions, "are now universally acknowledged to be masterpieces. For this reason every manner of making them accessible and popular has merit . . my aim has been attained if I stand on a level with the intelligent engraver, tha conscientious translator, who comprehends the spirit

The proof both of intention and accomplishment is manifest in how much of Beethoven is heard in this transcription and how little of Liszt. His opera paraphrases are pura Liszt, jubilantly extravagant, reckless in their virtuosic manipulation and elaboration of other men's tunes. But this Ninth Symphony—as is true of all Liszt's Beethoven transcriptions—is no paraphrase. It is Beethoven for the piano by a man who knew both the piano and Beethoven.

The same may be said for the Contiguglias. It was not just that their performance—their first of this work in public—was technically fluent and secure. It was rather that they sustained and fulfilled the mighty architectural plan of the piece. It was a tremendous accomplishment, and earned the cheers with which it was rewarded

Added to this was the markedly impressionist brushwork, a reminder that Boudin had taught Claude Monet and that Boudin's work is the immediate source of impressionism, a word first used in 1874 to describe the pupil's work. Hence the final bid of

This well-known picture was first sold by Durand-Ruel to A. Cochrane in New York in 1912, Later, it found its way into Wildenstein's Buenos Aires branch. Oddly enough, on Tuesday it fetched the comparatively low price of £29,400. This shows thet Monet's later work, never rated so high as his early paintings of the truly impressionist period (1870 to 1878-1880), has not yet reached top price levels.

A magnificent still life in Plcasso's finest fauva manner, dated 1908, rose to £25,200. This is a lot of money in spite of the painter's glamorous name becaus the work is atypical. At $20,060 it would have been expensive. A Hanri Matisse at $26,250 and a landscape by Alfred Sisley at Aside from a commonplace

Everything considered, the sale could hardly have been more satisfactory from the sellers' point of view. None of the pictures, e:cept the Boudin, was of the sort for which museums usually contend. But all sold well, at the high price levels now accepted impressionists and modern masters.

It is in the other areas of the same category that well-heeled collectors can hope to find bar-gains. The most obvious, in my opinion, was the beautiful riverside view by Corot which was sold on Tuesday for £10,700. An illustration of the paint-

I feel that the Corot will prove in the long run to have been one of the best buys in the sale. Strange as it may seem to art lovers not well acquainted with the market, Corot has not yet won proper-commercial recognition. Aesthetically, the merits of this landscape were, if anything, equal to those of Boudin's £35,700 pictures. The present fad for vivid colors—which in my opinion killed the Corot masterpiece —isn't likely to last forever Another good buy was a por-

The question readers directed at me was logical. In para-phrase, it asked, 'How can you judge pictures which presumably are about something, if you won't be able to tell for some years what they're about?"

This week I have a partial answer, given me, at a preview of his own one-man retrospective exhibition, also at the Whitney Museum, by pop artist James Rosenquist. He himself, he said, is often surprised, years after he has painted a picture, to see in it meanings he hadn't been Sound, light, shapes and text rather quaintly combine to produce this sort of environmental poem by Martial Raysse, who, three years ago, at this same gallery, was exhibiting a luminous keyhole shape projected onto the ceiling. This silhouette is the point of departure of a series of metamorphoses which are more or less explained or commented on a large pink poster, and exhibited in a cheer-ful non-sequitur of media.

Dine, Galerie Sonnabend, 12 Rne Mazarine, Paris 6, tentatively scheduled to the end of April These eight large paintings of Jim Dine's have a silly-friendly springlike galety about them that is rather ingratiating. Randomly bright-colored heart shapes to which a crazy conglomerate of everyday objects (including, as I recall, socks, a pair of cordurey. pants, a hammer, a beer can, etc.) have been affixed with no special aesthetic intention and no connotation of fetishism or solemnity.

May 6. The work of 22-year-old Bernard Moninot belongs to that school of high-definition realism that is presently receiving a good deal of critical attention. The present exhibition is devoted to his very precise drawings, mostly of the plate-glass windows of commercial premises.

Chollet, Galeria Boutique, 19 Rue Guénégaud, Paris 6, to May 14. The painted plastic forms of José Chollet are derived from the glossy-skinned shapes of modern machines somehow connected with transportation. A slight illusionist twist is added by painting a reflection of a landscape on the curved and polished surface.

Hairy, Gardone, La Galerie, 67
Rue Saint - André - des - Arts,
Paris 6, to April 30.

Sylvain Bairy and Alfieri Gar-done work together in the casting in sand of their works. In the process, which they have devised themselves, they gouge a shape into the sand and then pour molten aluminum into the hollow thus obtained. While not unrelated to the procedure of industrial casting, their method allows them to produce but a single copy of each work. The size and complexity of the pieces thus obtained is quite unexpected, and the immediacy of the artist's intervention throughout gives the rather cool material an unusual warmth. Cardone's work tends toward an abstract "geometry" while Hairy's rafers to the human anatomy.

still not my favorite painter, though I find him far more interesting than I did. But he may be re-examining himself, too. At his last exhibition, at the Castelli Gallery, he included one picture which, for one hour or so a day, was shrouded in a kind of opaque carbon dioxide fog produced by a mechanical device on the gal-lery floor. During the present Whitney Museum exhibition a much larger version of the same work is being recreated for showing on the sidewalk in front

Impact

How his picture will look through a fog, how it will change in its impact on himself as well as the public, is what he is concerned about. The "log," course, stands for anything: the physical space surrounding a picture; the mirrors of nostalgia or experience in which we see it; the events of the time in which it is seen. All can change a picture-or blur or even obliterate

Rosenquist recalled, during our conversation at the Whitney the other afternoon, a seminar held in Tokyo some years ago in which he and a number of other American artists, including the late Reinhart, had participate Reinhart was famous for his large, almost totally black pictures in which he was trying for "nothingness," he said. It was an approach associated with Zen (or so we all thought at the time), and one which, presumably, Japanese artists would under-

But a Japanese painter at the seminar rose to say that Reinhart's blackness didn't express nothingness at all. What, it did was to give new importance to objects and forms nearby, like footprints and clearette stubs. emphasized now by the adjoining blackness. "Working toward nothing," said the Japanese. "seems to produce everything."
That, at the moment, is what Rosenquist is investigating in his pictures. If you envelop a picture in a fog, hoping the fog will last at least until it reaches the viewer's eye-level, will he get nothing-or something new?

Salvador Dali is also concerned in his new exhibition at Knoedler's, with new perceptions result-ing from the interweaving of fragments of familiar images into a new whole. Only Dali doesn't rely on experience, or nostalgis, or a fog simulated for poetic or symbolic reasons.

His most recent works employ bolography, which is a new development of optical science (I think) having to do with the coding and recording on glass plates of images viewed through mercury arc lamps.

Dr. Dennis Gabor, who received the 1971 Nobel Prize for physics for his experiments with holography, has written the preface to the Dali exhibition catalogue.

The process, he writes, "is opening the third dimension for the artist... The artist can create in the studio landscapes which extend to the horizon, and they can be landscapes which have never existed. It needs only a genius like Salvador Dali, creating a new kind of art of which old, great painters may have dreamed, but which could only be realized by combining art with the most modern technology."

But Dr. Gabor is wrong. Old great painters didn't only dream of such "extensions"; they ac-complished them and without modern technology. They drew us into their own space. Dali knows it very well, and also writes of it in the catalogue. He talks Velazquer's great picture in the Prado. "Maids of Honor." portrait of the infants, with the image of the King and Queen seen in a mirror on the back wall, although they are not present.

The image proclaims, Dall says, that all is a reflection, and nothing but a reflection, except for the biologic and genetic reality incernated in the persons of the two monarchs... The presence of the royal couple which is precisely what Velazquez did not paint. contains in each particle not only the environment of the infanta and her entourage, but the totality of their reign ..."

I understand exactly what Dali finds in "Maids of Honor." I also find reflections of more than he has actually painted in his own work. But I don't need the complex electronic equipment set up in the gallery to enable me to see them. I look through the lenses, are lamps, and whatnot, and see a succession of tricky and distracting images. For me the built-in, do-it-yourself equipment, proceeding from Dali's enormous skill and my own experience, works better. There are fortunately enough of Dali's "straight" pictures in the show to compensate me for the tricks.

Skirting Disaster in a New Comedy

London Theater

By John Walker

ONDON, April 14 (IHT),-My heart sinks when I behold the name of Joyce Rayburn on a playbill. Mine is a minority reaction, for her two comedies "The Man Most Likely To" and "Don't Start Without Me" were received by the public with apparent enjoyment. "The Man Most Likely To," indeed, has been running in the West End for an inordinate time. In both, as the titles suggest, Miss Rayhurn wrote with plenty of coy sexual in-nuendo, taking a blatantly manipulative way with her characters, and dispensing a distasteful

"Come When You Like," her new comedy currently at the Shaw Theatre, is an improvement, for Miss Rayburn allows her creations a little individuality. But it is no more than a low-key domestic comedy that ambles along, just this side of boredom. Her dialogue remains relentlessly trivial. A typical exchange goes: "He has letters after his

"Letters? what, BO or BF?" That is as near as the play

approaches to wit.

The situation, too, is without much interest. Howard (Raymond Francis), a widower, wants to remarry against the wishes of his daughter Olive (Amanda Bar-rie), a frigid 32-year-old who shies away from the mention of sex and is content to act as housewife to her father. He introduces into the home a young man, Frank Alan Rothwell), as a prospective husband for his daughter. She plays along with the scheme in order to break up ber fatber's romance. In the end, of course after many misunderstandings. everyone lives happily ever after, with the father married and the daughter about to be.

Comic relief is supplied by a sloppy neighbor (an ingratiating performance by Bill Maynard) who is forever squirting soda on the carpet or gulping medicine for his indigestion. Miss Rayburn has not bothered to provide any motivation for Frank's interest in Olive, relying presumably on her audience's belief in love at first far better than it is. Her performance as a sby and awkward girl is as touching and delightful as that of Julia Poster in the Frank Marcus comedy "Notes on a Love Affair" and, in much the same way, saves the evening from disaster.

"Bakerloo Line," a short, funny play by the West Indian writer Mustapha Matura, provides some ideal lunchtime entertainment at The Almost Free Theatre until

In the most artificial of social functions, a party, a black man (Stefan Kalipba) flirts with a white woman (Ann Lynn), each of them wanting the other and as determined not to conform to racial stereotypes. We hear not only their casual chat but their thoughts about each other.

The man fears that he is regarded as a sex object, and vacillates between concern and embarrassment at how the girl reacts to a less sophisticated black (Salami Coker) with an alarming line in erotic dancing. He finally rationalizes his desire by deciding that he will colonize the girl in the same way that the whites

Japan's Payments Hit An $8-Billion Surplus

TOKYO. April 14 (AP-DJ).— epan's payments surplus in fiscal 371 soared to an estimated 3.055 billion from $1.999 billion year earlier, the Finance Minreported today.

The large gain was mainly the sult of a trade surplus that early doubled compared with ne 1870 fiscal year, and a large iflow of prepayments for Japaese exports as trading companies edged against an upward moveent of the yen during last ear's international currency

Exports in fiscal 1971 rose to record $24.755 billion, surpassing the year-earlier total by 25 ercent. The growth rate comares with a gain of 20.5 percent

Imports, on the other hand, ained only 5 percent, to a rec-rd $18.174 billion. Imports rose 0.8 percent during fiscal 1970, nd the lower rate of gain during

Record Surplus

This left a record trade surplus of $8.581 billion for fiscal 1971, up sharply from a $4.455billion surplus a year earlier. In the Finance Ministry's provisional accounting, the combined categories of transfer and service payments recorded a deficit of $2.098 billion, almost un-changed from a $2.090-billion deficit the previous year.

The net outflow of long-term capital widened to $1.761 billion from $1.347 billion a year earlier. Roldings of long-term assets abroad rose by $2.498 hillion, compared with a gain of $2.010 billion a year earlier.

The combined categories of errors and omissions and short-term capital showed a net inflow of $3,323 billion, up sharply from the $981-million surplus a year earlier. This was a reflec-tion of prepayments for exports, which are recorded in the errors and omissions category.

The ministry also said the estimated balance nf payments in March showed a surplus of $130 million, down from February's 561-million net inflow and the $529-million surplus a year earlier. Bank's Action

The sharp deterioration was mainly the result of a swing in tha errors and omissions plus short-term capital account to a net outflow position from a substantial surplus in February. This primarily reflected the Bank of Japan's decision, effectiva Feh. 24. to ban prepayments for Japanese exports.

A substantial increase in longterm capital leaving the country also contributed to March's smaller overall net inflow but the trade account registered another enormous surplus despite indications of a decline in the export growth rate and an accelerating tendency in the growth rate of imports.

March exports totaled $2.49 billion, up 19 percent from a year earlier. Imports totaled a record $1.55 billion, up 12 percent from March; 1971.

This left a trade surplus of.

U.K. Suffers Large Deficit In Its Trade

£80-Million Loss Is Biggest in 15 Months

LONDON, April 14 (AP).-Britain suffered e whopping deficit of £80 million ($208 million) in its trade with the rest of the world in March, the government announced today.

It was the second large monthly deficit in a row after a year of nearly unbroken trade surplus The government put the revised deficit for February at £33 million.

The larger March deficit was blamed pertly on the coal miners' etrike that month that forced massive electric power cuts and slowed industry to a halt.

The March deficit was Britain's largest since December 1970, when trading loss in deals with the rest of the world reached £233 million hecause of a crippling dockers' strike.

Figures released by the Department of Trade and Industry showed that during March exports and re-exports fell £31 million to £720 million. Imports rose £16 million to £800 million.

Average Loss In the first quarter of 1972, the government said. Britain's foreign trade averaged a loss of £37 million a month.

This three-month average is considered a better barometer for Britain's broad trade picture than the monthly figures. March was the first time in exactly a year that the three month average had shown a loss.

Financial markets here dipped immediately after the disappointing trade figures were announced. The figures announced today cover only the visible trade bal-ance—exports versus imports. The loss is cushioned somewhat by invisible carnings—shipping, banking and insurance revenne-now totaling some £50 million a month, the government said.

Industrial Orders In Germany Rise Steeply in Month

FRANKFURT, April 14 (AP-$940 million in March, up from DJ).—The seasonally adjusted $702 million a year earlier. The index for the order inflow rose to 107 (1970 equals 100) from the previous record level of 104, which it reached in January, 1972. and in April, May and June of 1971, the Bundesbank said.

For foreign orders, the index was at a record 114, up from 103 in January, from 99 a year ago and from the 1871 high of 107 chalked up last April.

Seasonally adjusted, the twomonth period this year produced a 13 percent rise in the foreign order inflow from the preceding two-month period and a "near 5 percent" increase from compareble 1971, the Bundeshank

The inflow of domestic orders, also seasonally adjusted, slightly trailed the January result, but on a two-month basis, the order inflow returned to the mid-1971 level, the Bundeshank noted.

Suez Pipeline Accord Signed

The general financial agreement for the $339million oil pipeline between Alexandris and the soutbern end of the Suez Canal has been initial-led in Cairo. The contract was originally to have been signed by the end of October last year, but was delayed reportedly because of disagreement over terms of repayment. The official Middle East News Agency says the state-owned General Petroleum Corp. signed for Egypt while the Banque de Suisse and the Arab-French Banks Union signed for the consortium of nations providing the financing for the project. The agency seys that the Swiss bank will collect the pipeline's toils on behalf of the creditor nations over a period of eight years after its operation, with a certain percentage going to the Egyptian government for maintenance. The percentage was not specified. It adds that agreements with individual creditors and nil companies seeking to employ the pipeline remain to be concluded before ectual construction starts. It is estimated that the average annual income of the project will reach

The announcement in Manila climaxed several months of heated competition among seven for eign car makers, all with assembly operations in the Philippines in partnership with local firms. to participate in the country's progressive car-manufacturing program. The three firms not selected—Renault, Chrysler end Nissan Motor will be forced to phase out their current car assembly operations within the next year because the central bank will end allocations of dollars for the import of parts and accessories.

Union Minière to Cut Dividend

Union Minière directors propose to lower the dividend payable June 9 to 75 Belgian francs from 95 francs paid last year. The company says final results confirmed expectations and profits for 1971 were "well below those for 1970." How-ever, it did not disclose profit figures. Among reasons for the profit decline, Union Minière cited icw prices for non-ferrous metals, a "mark-ed fall" in the results of several of its investments, declining interest rates on its loans and deposits and the need to write down various investments because of felling stock market

AT&T's 'New Era' Picturephone Shelved for Want of Customers

By William H. Jones

WASHINGTON, April 14 (WP .- A device hailed by American Telephone & Telegraph Co. last year es opening "a new era in telecommunications"—the picturephone—has been put on the shelf for want of customers.

Even the White House—where Chesapeak & Potomac Tele-phone Co. installed 10 of the phones free of charge in 1870 on an experimental basis—has declined to purchase the service. Budget officers decided they could not justify the expense-C&P rates are $110 per month for a picturephone line plus $60 a month per set, in addition to a cnetime line charge of $100 and onetime set charge of $50. Customers receive 30 minutes of calling time a month, and must pay 20 cents for every additional minute.

Beside the steep expense of the service, AT&T spokesmen said major factors contributing to the picturephone failure were e morass of service problems in New York City.

Initial long distence service is seen as impractical without New York connections, because of the concentration of potential customers there who would desire visual communications with fecilities elsewhere. "The picturephone's no good if there is no one else to talk to," an AT&T spokesman comments.

FOREVER FLOWING

By Vasily Grossman. Translated from the Russian by Thomas P. Whitney. Harper & Row. 247 pp. $6.95.

Reviewed by Thomas Lask

IN one of the powerfully conceived images in Vasily Grossman's novel, the Russian state is described in physical terms as an entity of such great mass as to warp everything that comes within its orbit. How Russians were bent by that magnetic pull from their decency, their humanity is the substance of this novel. It isn't, strictly speaking, a novel at all, even within the latitude granted that term. The characters, though distinctive, are types, examples in a dissertation on the postrevolutionary state.

There is no story to speak of, and what story there is, one of betrayal, imprisonment and release, is ueither new nor un-known. But the form does not matter nor the old fashioued writing (if we judge the original by Thomas Whitney's translation) nor such clumsy devices as the intrusion of the author to the forgetful exclusion of his main figure. "Forever Flowing" is not intended as blithe entertainment; it is the thoughts of a man who has seen much, wondering amid the ruins and shards of his life how they came about. As such it is as eloquent a memorial to the anonymous little man in the Stalinist state as "Dr. Zhivago" is to the artistic spirit in post-Czarist Russia and "The First Circle" to the scientific intelligentsia.

"Forever Flowing" is a look at the Soviet state from the very bottom, not from the bottom of society or the political spectrum, but from the place where all the lofty decisions from on high, all abstractly conceived theories, all high sounding resolves are translated into human endeavor and measured by human results. It is the place where all theories are made flesh. Grossman judges all theories by a simple rule: What happens to the people to whom they apply?

As he follows the results from the time of Lenin to that of the post-World War II leadership, he concludes that the state is a rapacions, relentless, soul-crushing adversary—an enemy of the people. Yet so powerful is the embracing magnetism of the state that the citizenry contrive at their own downfall. At the worst it allows the scum, the Yagodas and Berias to come to the top; at best it corrupts even the well-meaning and men of principle. The real saints are tew and far between.

Ivan Grigoryevich has been given his freedom after 30 years in the Russian slave labor camps, and he returns to Moscow, to Leningrad, to once familiar places an old, gaunt, bent man. As he visits a cousin, encounters a comrade who had denounced him to the prosecutor, finds lodgings and a job for himself, Russia's history, his own past and that of so many he knew boil and bubble in his mind. His reappearance disconcerts those he meets; they find their dormant consciences flickering to life, unpleasant memories floating to the top of their minds.

Some had given in to base demands a little at a time only to find themselves so far in, it was as distasteful to turn back as to go on. Some had believed that they were working for the good of the state. Some were greedy, some were seduced by ambition or high office. The motives and the reasoning were always complicated, intertwined, rationalized And as the author points out the thinking inside the camp was exactly the same as that of the world outside. The ideologies of the prisoners were as varied and ingenious as the men who had put them there. They were after all the same Russians.

Vasily Grossman, who died h 1964, was a novelist. playwright and war correspondent, whose work after World War II was so severely criticized that he never finished a novel about that war although part of it had already appeared in print. The present work occupied him for the iss eight years of his life. It has not been published in Russia for reasons that will be clear to every

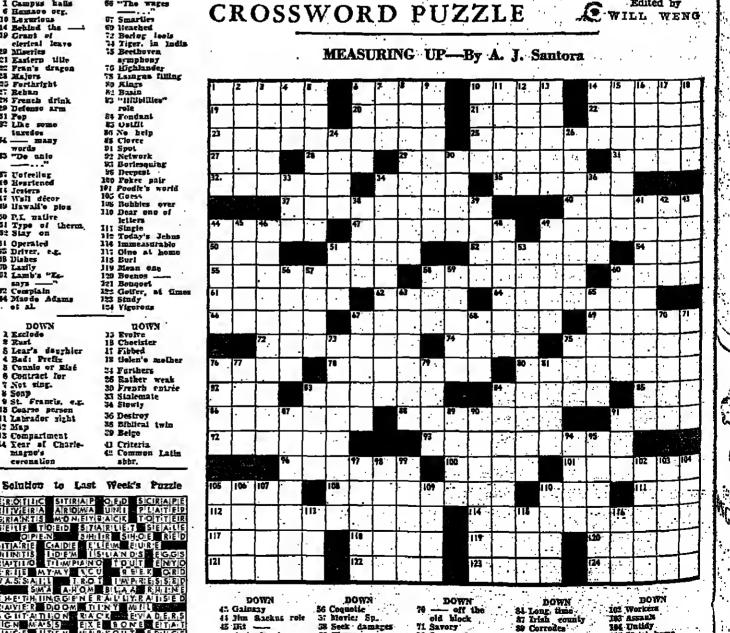

One of them is that he goe beyond Stalin to Lenin when be comes to place the blame for the excesses of the Soviet state. He dismisses the human side Lenin, his personal modesty, his courtesy, his love of music, his patience with a citizen, not because they are not true, but because they did not really count in guiding the revolution and in establishing the new state. These took intellectual arrogance, ruthlessness, insulting impatience with opposition and contemp for western notions of individual freedom. Those who shered Lenin's gentler side, Bukbarin, Rykov, Kamenev and Zinoviev, were crushed as mercilessly by Stalin as these qualities were eliminated from the body politic Stalin, says the author, was Lenin's true heir. The force that fashioned the revolution later guided the purges.

But an idea of even greater abhorrence to the Russian hier-archy as well, perhaps, to the Russian people, is the one that sees the Soviet statemes a natural result of Russian history. The serf-like mentality of the Russian people has been a weight on the liberating spirit of the country for a thousand years. In a passage that shoots a sharp light into the discussion. Grossman argues that Lenin was chosen by the Russian people. He was their kind of leader.

In spite of all his pessimistic assessments, he contends that the spirit of freedom lives on in the Russian heart and that it will ultimately flower even in his native land. How this will come about in the light of all he has said is never made clear. Very likely it was Grossman's last wan hope. By the time he died, perhaps there was nothing left.

Baseball Trades Business Suits For Uniforms as Strike Ends

By Joseph Durso

NEW YORK, April 14 (NYT).-Most players are expected to have rejoined their baseball clubs by tonight with the rest en route rom places as far away as the Carlbbean as baseball prepares or tomorrow's opening of the eason. The first general strike n the history of the game ended n its 13th day yesterday when he players and owners agreed hat the 86 games missed before omorrow'e openers would not be

The settlement was reached in Thicago, where the owners of the 4 major-league teams gathered esterday, and in New York, where the player representatives ad been meeting for three days. The original issue an increase n the players' pensions, which re financed by television money -aiready had been solved by a ompromise raise of $500,000. The inal issue—whether to pay the dayers for games rescheduled ecause of the strike-was breachd by the bobtailed season.

As a result, some teams like be Houston Astros and San-Diego Padres will play nine games ess than a full season of 162, all eams will miss at least six games and divisional championships will e decided on a straight perentage basis. They customarily re decided that way, but most jubs usually manage to complete ull seasons despite bad weather ny scheduling doubleheaders.

Nine Days' Pay For the 600 players, whose alaries will begin tomorrow in$675; for those at the big-league average of $32,500, it will be $1,600; for Henry Aaron of the Atlanta Braves, who is bearing down on Babe Ruth's home-run record at nearly $200,000 a season, rust over $9.880. -

NBA Knicks Rip Celtics in Playoff Opener

By Thomas Rogers

BOSTON, April 14 (NYT) .-First blood in the championship eeries of the National Basketball Association's Eastern Conference went to the New York Knicks last night at Boston Gardenand they inflicted a deep wound.

The Knicks took the opener of the four-of-seven-game playoff from the Celtics, the regular-season winner in the Atlantic Division, 116-94, with a stunning and perfectly tuned combination of offense and defense.

The Celtics' partisans in the crowd of 14,292 had little to cheer about as the Knicks bounded to a 10-point lead, 19-9, after 7 1,2 minutes of play. The high-water mark was 27 points, 113-86, two minutes from the

Although it was truly a team triumph, Walt Frazier of New York awed the crowd with a complete display of his offensive arsenal. The ice-cool Knick scored .36 points, hitting 14 of 19 shots from the floor and eight of 10 from the free-throw line.

Stanley Cup Quarterfinal

Rangers Eliminate Canadiens of NHL

By Gerald Eskenazi

MONTREAL, April 14 (NYT). -On a day when President Nixon met with Prime Minister Pierro Elliott Trudeau to improve relations between the United States and Canada, the Rangers set back the Canadiens and made them give up the Stanley Cup. The New Yorkers won the bockey game at The Forum

iast night, 3-3, to capture the Stanley Cup quarterfinal series, four games to two, and eliminata the defending champions from Montreal, who won the cup last year.

The triumph was a symbolic break with the past-a past of Montreal dominance and Ranger failures in playoff games.

The last time the Rangers defeated the Canadiens in a National Hockey League post-season series was in 1950. Since then, the Canadiens had won

The Canadlens kept heavy pressure on goalie Ed Giacomin in the first 8 minutes.

But it was the Rangers who scored first—on the club's first drive of the game, after 9 minutes 31 seconds. Tkaczuk went around J.C. Tremblay and Ken Dryden made the save but Fairbairn put in the Rookie Gene Carr earned his first point of the series as New York went in front, 2-1, at 9:23 of the second period. Carr skated around Guy LaFleur, passed the puck to Fairbairn in the slot, and Fairbairn scored. A backhand shot by Jacques Lemarle

The climactic third period began with one of the most surprising goals of the series. Tkaczuk rammed a 50-footer past Dryden, on which the goalie simply fanned. He was croucbed, and his 6-foot-4 frame was well below the 4-foot-high crossbar. It sailed over his shoulder for

South Africa Again Barred By Davis Cup

COPENHAGEN, April 14 (UPI). The special committee of the Davis Cup tennis nations today again expelled South Africa from

But the decision apparently did not rule out South African participation in the 1973 tourns-Davis Cup nations eecretary

Basil Reay of Britain said the committee reversed its decision because other nations did not know when they filed their en-tries for the 1972 tournament that South Africa would be allowed He said that in the future all nations would be informed of South Africa's entry in enough time to decide whether they wanted to participate or not, "Any nation withdrawing after entries have been filed will thus be severely punished." Reay said. U.S. Request

Today's meeting was called at the request of Walter Elcock, vice-president of the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association. The United States voted against the read-mission of South Africa last January, South Africa was originally banned because of its policy of apartheid. The country has since beld some integrated sports events. "Naturally we are very disappointed," sald Alf Chalmers, president of the South African Lawn Tennis Association, "The committee has taken the easy way out. "It was a question of excluding eight or nine nations or making a scapegoat of one country, South Africa. Still, today's decision was a big concession which made our trip to Copenhagen worthwhile,

"The committee agreed that, if the rules had been different, then our entry would have been accepted."

Chalmers said South Africa would almost certainly apply for entry in the 1973 tournament wheo the Davis Cup natioos meet in London on July 6. At today's meeting, the committee recommended acceptance of South Africa for 1973 if the new rules were followed.

Taxpayers' Prayer

We beseech You in our hour edition, of need to look down kindly on Your humble taxpaying servants who have given all we possess to the almightly Internal Revenue Service. Grant us that we have completed our Form 1040 correctly so no power will find fault with it.

We pray to Buchwald have added lines 12, 13C, 14 and 15 accurately, and that we have subtracted line 17 from line 16 so our adjusted gross income is computed to their divine satisfac-

We ask You. O Lord, to protect nur exemptions and bless our deductions as outlined in Schedule A (Form 1040) (see Chapter 10 and 11.

Have mercy on those of us who failed to wisely estimate our payments during the year, and must now borrow from Peter to pay Paul. Blessed are those who spent more than they earned and cantributed so much to the economy,

Give us the strength, Lord, to find losses to wipe out our net gains (see Form 4797) so that we may dwell in a lower tax bracket

Russia Reported Faking Charge To Harass Panov

MOSCOW, April 14 (Reuters). -Police last night questioned Valery Panov. a Jewish dancer who had spent 10 years with the Leningrad Kirov Ballet, about alleged "hooliganism" on his part, friends of Mr. Panov reported.

The dancer, 33, was dismissed from the ballet company last Friday after applying to emigrate to Israel.

He was questioned last night after police said his mother-in-law charged that he had assault
And finally if, as You have ed her, his friends reported,

They claim that this is a trumped-up charge and that the real reason for the trouble is official displeasure at his wish to emigrate to Israel.

Liliana Cavani directing Pierre Clementi in

"I Cannibali."

-MARY BLUME

Liliana Cavani And the Young

PARIS (INT).—After Lilians Cavani's film, "I Cannibali," was shown at the New York Pestival, an angry spectator grabbed Miss Cavani by the lapels and began shauting, "You're crazy, you're

Miss Caveni, a stocky, decidedly unmod-ish 35-year-old Italian, shook him of calmly. "I think he was afraid. People are afraid. I prefer in life to understand. I'm not afraid unless I don't understand."

"I Cannibali" just opened this week in Paris to a warm sendoff that was in part a tribute to its male star, the French actor Pierre Clementi, who was recently given a harsh two-year sentence in Rome on drug charges. Funds are being col-lected in Paris for Clementi, said to be in poor condition, and the Cinematheque gave him a hommage.

By now in Italy, Miss Cavani says, the Clementi case has been nearly forgotten. "His case is so small in proportion to the Valpreda and Peltrinelli cases. "I would never have thought it possible," she added with a sigh, "that fascism could return in the name of order. It is possible because for 25 years it's been hidden."

Too young to have anything but a child's memory of World War II but the chief memory she has is a riveting one: Too small to be noticed, she slipped one day through police lines and found berself by the side of 25 Italian hostages who were about in be shot by the Germans). Liliana Cavani became an expert on the period by chance. After college she was one of 30 winners of an Italian state television contest (there were 10,000 candidates) and her first job was to direct a program on the history of the Third Reich, Later, she did programs on women members of the Italian resistance and on Marshal Philippe Pétain.

Most of the directors who have been making political films in Italy were in the war during their youth, Miss Cavani says. The political films of the older generation, she adds, citing the director Damiano Domiani as an example. have become merely another kind of commercial film, with just the right doses of sentimentality and sadism.

"But Bellochio, Bertolucci and I are of a generation that never saw the war. For us. problems are more complicated and subtle, we don't see clear lines of good and bad. That's why our films are not as popular."

Miss Cavani's next film takes place in a hotel where a club of Nazi war criminals holds its meetings. "I want to talk about the sense of guilt," she says, adding that there is very little of it in Italy.

Understanding

"For me, good and had depend on a situation. I'm not saying a Nazi is neces-sarily worse than I am. I want to understand him. After all, he doesn't come from Mars or the moon."

Liliana Cavani's film "I Cannibali" has nothing to do with anthropophagy. A study of reactions to tyranny based loosely on the Antigone myth, the film is set in the near future and the "cannibals" are young people who realize life must return to a purer primitive state, with the burial of the dead from Antigone symbolizing human love and responsibility.

"Most of the people who like my film are young," Miss Cavani says. "I didn't intend to make a film about the difference between the generations, but that's what it's turned out to be. The young and old have different ways of seeing things—in the same country there is a hig difference between older Marxists and younger Marxists." The film has been taken by an American distributor but has not yet been released there: Miss Cavani fears that the distributor is more interested in James Bond type pictures—"the thrillings" as she calls them.

Raised in Carpl in the Emilia region of Italy. Miss Cavani studied classics at the University of Bologna and took a doctorate in linguistics. She is interested in the works of Chomsky and others who see the social and political implications of language and for "I Cannibali" found it essential that Pierre Clementi speak only a language was in fact a dialect from the Cameroons).

"I Cannibali" is full of the terrible silences that occur when a dialogue is sug-gested. The people who accept tyranny talk a good deal, in mindless cliches. The young rebels say very little.

"It was very important that they have no slogans, that they are working alone, not as a group." Miss Cavani says. This is in part a reaction to the 1968 uprisings which, directly they were over, became consumer objects.
"I was startled to see that books were being sold with revolutionary slogans, and so were buttons and paving stones, "In Italy there is even a Boutique of Contestation. They have everything there, including a doll you throw a brick at. When it's hit it holds its head and screams
